Tyler Bose Advocates for Sorghum Producers in Washington, D.C.

LINCOLN, Neb. (April 2, 2026) – Tyler Bose of Arcadia represented Nebraska sorghum producers last week in Washington, D.C., as part of his role on the legislative committee with the National Sorghum Producers. During his time on Capitol Hill, Bose met with policymakers and advocated for issues important to sorghum producers, working to advance policies that support agriculture in Nebraska and across the country.

Bose wrapped up his visit by attending the Great American Agriculture Celebration at the White House, joining agricultural leaders from across the nation.

“It’s an honor to represent Nebraska sorghum producers on a national stage,” said Bose. “Having the opportunity to visit directly with policymakers and share our story is critical to ensuring agriculture and sorghum specifically, continues to have a strong voice in Washington.”

Nebraska Sorghum Producers expressed appreciation for Bose’s leadership and commitment to the industry.

“Tyler’s involvement shows just how important it is for growers to be engaged beyond the farm,” said Kristine Jameson, Executive Director for Nebraska Sorghum. “These conversations help shape the future of agriculture, and it takes dedicated leaders like Tyler to make sure our industry is represented.”

Bose’s experience also highlights the value of leadership development within the sorghum industry. Programs like Leadership Sorghum, offered through the United Sorghum Checkoff Program, provide growers and industry professionals with opportunities to build skills, expand their networks, and engage in advocacy efforts that impact agriculture at every level.

Applications are now open for Leadership Sorghum Class VIII. The program equips participants with the tools and experiences needed to step into leadership roles and represent the sorghum industry both locally and nationally.

“Getting involved in programs like Leadership Sorghum is one of the best ways to grow as a leader and make a difference,” said Bose. “We encourage anyone with a passion for agriculture to apply.”

Nebraska sorghum producers and industry partners are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity and apply.
